“ It's been two years and I still miss you, Ma. I wish you could come home. It doesn't feel the same without you. ”

“ It was in the 90's when I met this petite beautiful woman at the MMSU campus. She had a beautiful smile and a very friendly voice, and she said "I'm Malou". We became instant friends and I felt welcome rightaway specially for someone like me who didn't speak Ilocano but studying in ILocos. We became classmates and dorm neighbors. I will always remember weekends when both of us will not go home to our hometown and because we didn't cook, we will both walk to manggahan where a small eatery was located and we will buy our lunch and dinner. We will chat and laugh at the same time even under the scorching heat of the sun. Then years passed and we became group mates in nursing school. I knew more about Malou through the years in nursing school. We became good friends but our friendship was also challenged by immaturity mostly from my part. I have hurt her and our other friends many times, more than I can count, but through it all, she's still the nice and kind Malou that I knew. Malou had a big heart and always ready to forgive that's why I didn't forget her. I knew she will always be my friend. I lost contact with her after college but I never forget her and her friendship. I prayed that one day, I will see her again and I did!!! We met again at Friendster and that was one of the happiest days of my life specially when I learned that she and Dong got married and had 4 children 😍. I was given the opportunity to say "sorry" and to tell her how blessed I am to be friends with her and Dong. Since then, I didn't let go of our friendship. I didn't want to lose a precious friend again. We will talk for hours just about anything but mostly reminiscing our college days. Then Life became busy as we did all the mundane tasks that we had to do to live, but Malou never forgot to text or call me when she didn't hear from me for days or weeks. Even on text messages, we were laughing at simple things and she always made my day easy at work because I felt good I have a great friend. When I learned she was sick again, my heart hurt so much because I knew how much her body endured the pain. Malou never complained but always gave glory to God for the beautiful life she had with Dong and their kids. I was thinking of her on the way to work One beautiful rainy morning on November 2, 2015, then when I got off the bus, I saw three rainbows. I took a picture of the rainbows and sent it to her. I told her her courage and faith are like these rainbows... They appear when it rains.... She told me it was beautiful! And that was the last text message we had. The following days were the hardest days when I didn't know what lies ahead... I just kept on praying that God will touch her with His healing hands. On the afternoon of November 5, one of the saddest afternoon in my life, the sky looked like there was a fire on the horizon. It reminded me again of Malou... She was beautiful like the rainbows but she was also like the fire in the rain with her courage and faith. And today November 13, I remembered her again while I was sitting on the bus thinking it will be her service tomorrow and I couldn't come. When I looked out on the window, I saw this calm and beautiful sky reflecting on the water. I cried again because I knew it was her reminding me that life is beautiful and friendship is a gift. I love you Malou and I will always will... thank you for the sweet memories and all the beautiful things I saw and experienced because you are my friend... Til we meet again...
