To The Callahan Family,

I got to meet Walter in his last few days and got to be his "Last New Friend". As a hospice chaplain, I get to meet hundreds of families a year and it is always refreshing to get to meet such a pleasant, happy and close knit family.

I could tell when I was putting the photos together to make the tribute movie, that there were a lot of happy times that were spent together.

All of us thank Walter for his service. Walter has gone to his rest, but his memories will bless those who knew him forever. Our hospice team was glad that we could be there for such a wonderful family and provide care for a real hero.

“ My deepest sympathy to Walter's family and friends. We are honored and proud to have been able to provide care for someone that has given so much to our nation. Looking at the pictures of him in the Navy during World War II, reminds me of a saying an old salty sailor told me when I first joined the Navy, "WW2, When the ships were wood, and the men were steel." It is obvious his words rang true looking at Walter.

Watching the tribute video of Walter, shows another side, a devoted husband and father. While it is saddening to lose someone like Walter, he will live in on, in the hearts of his family and all those he has touched.

To my Shipmate Walter, I wish you fair winds and following seas, until we meet in the next life.
